BEST INVITATION-ONLY PENTHOUSES

The Cosmopolitan's Boulevard Penthouse is the "hotel within a hotel" that you never want to leave. And who could blame you? If you have the bankroll to earn an invite to any of the 21 recently unveiled suites on the 71st to 75th floors, you'll enjoy pampering and privacy unheard of on the Las Vegas Strip. Challenged to find space to keep their high-rollers happy, Cosmopolitan ownership transformed four vacant floors into a 63,000-square-foot luxury paradise, bringing in acclaimed firms Daun Curry, Richmond International and Tihany Design to give each one a unique look. The results include Instagram-worthy touches such as a life-size birdcage, a Pegasus statue and various Marilyn Monroe-inspired art pieces (a favorite of Adam Tihany, who also designed the 71st floor's Reserve gaming club). Amenities vary suite to suite, but enviable perks include 24-hour butler service, in-suite fitness studios, pool tables, private terraces and $10,000 toilets.

BEST CUSTOM JEWELER

When he arrived in Las Vegas in 1973, Mordechai Yerushalmi earned his reputation as a celebrity jeweler designing rings for Liberace and Elvis Presley. Forty-five years later, he's still No. 1 in the eyes of athletes and movie stars passing through the heavily guarded front door of The Jewelers of Las Vegas, hoping Yerushalmi will bring their dream bling to life. "You give us a picture, we study it, we do a wax mold for it, and then we have a pretty accurate [idea] of how much gold and diamonds it takes," he explains. Among Yerushalmi's most recent celebrity designs: a pair of heart-shaped, diamond-encrusted cuff links and a poker chip for comedian (and frequent Las Vegas visitor) Kevin Hart, as well as a massive 35-carat chain for a celebrity who wished not to be named. Some celebs prefer their privacy, an employee remarks, but "you could pull a truck with it."
